Blockchain and Public Law

Global Challenges in the Era of Decentralisation

Edited by Oreste Pollicino, Bocconi University, Italy and Giovanni De Gregorio, University of Oxford, UK

'This book cuts through the blockchain hype by compiling the research of prominent scholars that critically engage with the technology and its legal implications. It is a rich collection of lucid evaluations of blockchain and the law and an invaluable resource for anyone interested in this particular technology but also the intersection between law and technological innovation more generally.'

Research Handbook on Intellectual Property and Employment Law

Edited by Niklas Bruun, Professor Emeritus, Hanken School of Economics, Former Director of the IPR University Center, Helsinki, Finland and Visiting Professor, Faculty of Law, Stockholm University, Sweden and Marja-Leena Mansala, Former Secretary General of the IPR University Center, Helsinki, Finland

'This book contributes to the endeavor of promoting new and better incentives for creative and scientific work, with equity in mind, all at a global scale. It brings together an international collection of experts in the fields of intellectual property and labor law. They ground the larger community of researchers in an urgent agenda for better, global matches between these fields that can help reconcile the corporate, employee, and social interests at stake.'

Intellectual Property and Sustainable Markets

Edited by Ole-Andreas Rognstad, and Inger B. Ørstavik, University of Oslo, Norway

'This is an excellent book which explores an important issue for scholarship and society. It crosses silos and engages directly with the cultural, commercial, market based and technological elements with which intellectual property and sustainability are entwined. The contributions are of individual significance and the work as a whole will be of interest to scholars, policymakers and industry.'

The Future of the Employment Contract

Douglas Brodie, University of Strathclyde, UK

'In Douglas Brodie's The Future of the Employment Contract, one of the world's leading scholars on the employment contract provides a rich and judicious examination of the prospects for a worker-protective common law. The result is an impressive piece of scholarship that is sensitive to the virtues and the vices of the common law mind when it encounters the world of work. It deserves to be widely read, and it will influence academic and judicial debates at the frontiers of the discipline.'

Research Methods in International Law

A Handbook

Edited by Rossana Deplano, University of Leicester and Nicholas Tsagourias, University of Sheffield, UK

'Academic international lawyers may have come to consider and discuss methodological concerns relatively late, but today's international law has grown into a mature academic discipline, taken seriously both by outside audiences and itself. This Handbook contains a rich overview of contending approaches and techniques, often proxies for grand theories and perspectives. It offers food for thought, inspiration, wisdom, and things one can cheerfully disagree with – the editors are to be congratulated for having produced such a well-rounded volume.'

The Legal Limits of Direct Democracy

A Comparative Analysis of Referendums and Initiatives across Europe

Edited by Daniel Moeckli, Anna Forgács and Henri Ibi, University of Zurich, Switzerland

'Like representative democracy, direct democracy needs the limits of the rule of law to be not only democratic but liberal. A work that fills a void, both precious collection of data on the legal framework of referendums and initiatives in Europe, and proof that direct democracy can and must be something other than the unhindered reign of the popular will – or of political actors who convene it.'

Globalisation, Populism, Pandemics and the Law

The Anarchy and the Ecstasy

Mark Findlay, Singapore Management University, Australian National University, University of New South Wales, Australia and University of Edinburgh, UK

Advocating a style of law and a role for legal agency which returns to its essential humanist ideology and represents public spiritedness, this unique book confronts the myths surrounding globalisation, advancing the role for law as a change agent unburdened from its current market functionality.

Goodwill in Passing Off

A Common Law Perspective

Catherine W. Ng, Aberdeen University, UK

'This book explores an area of the law which is an important tool for regulating the market but has attracted less attention than it deserves. Ng presents an original argument that misrepresentation not goodwill should be central to the tort. The book is expansive, covering a number of jurisdictions and also the relationship of passing off to registered trademarks and other intellectual property rights. Overall, it presents a significant reconceptualization of the law of passing off.'

Legal Doctrinal Scholarship

Legal Theory and the Inner Workings of a Doctrinal Discipline

Mátyás Bódig, University of Aberdeen, UK

'Competent legal scholars need to be familiar with the right ways in which claims about the law can be vindicated, but this does not imply they possess great awareness of either the epistemic status or the political implications of their scholarship. These are important and complex matters, whose grasp would greatly improve both our understanding of legal scholarship and assist legal scholars in further refining their art. Professor Bodig's Legal Doctrinal Scholarship faces up to the challenge of investigating the epistemology and politics of doctrinal scholarship with great skill and insight, providing a fresh perspective on a crucial aspect of the legal experience.'

International Justice in the United Nations General Assembly

Michael Ramsden, Chinese University of Hong Kong and Barrister Door Tenant, 25 Bedford Row, London

'International Justice in the United Nations General Assembly is a much-needed account of the UN General Assembly's under-studied role in international law-making. Ramsden's comprehensive review of the UNGA's role since its founding to advance international accountability for atrocity crimes provides important insight into how UNGA resolutions, Commissions of Inquiry, and other tools shape the jurisprudence of courts, regional bodies, and other UN organs. Ramsden's analysis is an important contribution to understanding the relationship between aspiration and actualization in international law.'

Research Handbook on Art and Law

Edited by Jani McCutcheon and Fiona McGaughey, The University of Western Australia, Australia

'In an age where imaginative thinking is needed more than ever, this lively meeting of minds is a most welcome endeavor. Moving beyond registers of opposition, this wide-ranging collection addresses the intersection of art and law as a necessary provocation for thinking more deeply about what it means to live fully and justly. Lawyers, judges, legal theorists, philosophers, curators and artists are deftly brought together, making this Handbook invaluable for anyone invested in the intersection of law and culture.'

Rethinking Environmental Law

Why Environmental Laws Should Conform to the Laws of Nature

Jan G. Laitos, University of Denver, US

'Almost everyone acknowledges that some changes are necessary to U.S. environmental law. Jan G. Laitos goes back to first principles to ask how human-created law can better align with natural principles. He offers a compelling mantra of symmetry, economy, and entanglement to replace our current emphasis on separation. The book's clear prose and fast pace make it accessible to anyone curious about the issues facing human "management" of the environment in the 21st century, while still offering an argument provocative to seasoned practitioners.'

The Policy Uptake of Citizen Sensing

Anna Berti Suman, Tilburg University, The Netherlands, and the European Commission Joint Research Centre, Ispra, Italy

'Anna Berti Suman has written a remarkable book about the policy uptake of grassroots citizen sensing. With great insight, Berti Suman extends our thinking with respect to the notions of citizen sensing, policy uptake, and risk governance. Her point about "integration dilemma" will be of interest to readers in public policy studies, environmental studies, and disaster studies. This book will change the way academics, policy-makers and citizen sensing practitioners think about communication between citizens and institutional actors in Europe and beyond.'

Giving Future Generations a Voice

Normative Frameworks, Institutions and Practice

Edited by Jan Linehan and Peter Lawrence, University of Tasmania, Australia

'Short-termism in policymaking is usually lamented as inexorable. We prioritize short-term policy outcomes, we often hear, because future generations are powerless. Giving Future Generations a Voice shows that it need not be so. Gathering specialists from various fields, it explores a range of institutions, from ombudspersons to citizens' assemblies to sustainable development institutions, to better reflect future interests in present policies. It is an indispensable collection for anyone wishing to learn what grounds such institutions and how to make them work.'

Environmental Taxation in the Pandemic Era

Opportunities and Challenges

Edited by Hope Ashiabor, Climate Policy Consultant, Australia, Janet E. Milne, Vermont Law School, US and Mikael Skou Andersen, Aarhus University, Denmark

'The 2020-21 pandemic crisis confirms the opportunity for integrating environmental taxation into the core structure of fiscal systems. Carbon taxes, resources taxes, removal of environmental harmful subsidies allow labour taxes to be abated substantially. Economic instruments might not be "the" solution, but they are certainly "part" of the solution if we wish to achieve the ambitious but necessary objectives of the UN SDGs, Paris Agreement, CBD on biodiversity and natural capital. We have here substantial contributions with robust analysis that can be used by all Governments and researchers.'

Edited by Amanda Kennedy, Queensland University of Technology, Australia, Anél du Plessis, North-West University, South Africa, Rob Fowler, University of Adelaide, Australia, Evan Hamman, Queensland University of Technology, Australia and Ceri Warnock, University of Otago, New Zealand

'This book represents a real breakthrough. It is the first to explore in depth how to overcome the daunting challenges of teaching environmental law. The field's rapid growth during the last half century has made it more important than ever, but also more difficult, to understand how law seeks to combat environmental problems. The book examines a rich variety of approaches to teaching environmental law through the experienced eyes of a multinational group of outstanding teachers and scholars. It offers fresh insights that will be of great value no matter how long one has been teaching in this field.'

Advanced Introduction to Maritime Law

Paul Todd, University of Southampton, UK

Designed to be accessible yet rigorous, Elgar Advanced Introductions are stimulating and thoughtful introductions to major fields in law, expertly written by the world's leading scholars.

'This short book covers the sort of introductory background and contextual material that often has to be crammed into the first week or so of maritime commercial law courses studied in the UK (in particular). "Maritime Law" is treated broadly so as to include international sales and marine insurance, as well as traditional carriage and Admiralty issues. The book will particularly suit international students, unfamiliar with the common law system, and uses simple, colloquial – sometimes even conversational – language.'

Research Handbook on International Law and Cities

Edited by Helmut Philipp Aust, Freie Universität Berlin, Germany and ILA Study Group on 'The Role of Cities in International Law' and Janne E. Nijman, University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands, The Graduate Institute, Switzerland, T.M.C. Asser Instituut and ILA Study Group on 'The Role of Cities in International Law'.

With Miha Marcenko, T.M.C. Asser Institute, the Netherlands

'Aust and Nijman's Research Handbook on International Law and Cities captures the complexity, and the controversy, of the relationship between cities and international law in all its splendour. This is a skilfully designed and executed – and coherent – work from the leading legal scholars in the field. The reader is led through the history, structure and many of the current issues in what is an increasingly well-established field, both academically and in practice. There will be many more thematic avenues to explore but the principles and the path are set out here. This book will become a dear friend for many historians, political scientists and lawyers, to name but a few.'

Principles of International Trade and Investment Law

Andrew D. Mitchell, Monash University and Elizabeth Sheargold, University of Wollongong, Australia

'In this thorough and illuminating study Andrew D. Mitchell and Elizabeth Sheargold explore the role that principles play in international trade and investment law. They show us how the principles of due process and reasonableness have a central place in international economic law, and the treaty rules on non-discrimination and necessity are underpinned by broader principles of non-discrimination and necessity. This is a rich and insightful analysis of the little-explored interaction of rules and principles in international trade and investment law.'

Counterfeit and Falsified Medicines in the EU

A Legal Perspective

Vishv Priya Kohli, CBS Law, Copenhagen
Business School, Denmark

'The problem of counterfeit medicines, while having its political, economic, medical and social dimension, is also a legal problem. This work is a study of the legal side of counterfeiting from the EU perspective. It provides a comprehensive analysis of the current EU regulatory framework, including medical law, IP law and criminal law. In addition to that, the book also offers detailed case studies of some of the most exciting counterfeiting examples explaining how they were dealt with. A timely and useful work.'

Edited by Elizabeth Pollman, University of Pennsylvania Law School and Robert B. Thompson, Georgetown University Law Center, US

'The enduring question of the role of corporations in society is again central. With evidence that stockholder power has contributed to lower gainsharing with workers, increased externalities, and corporate conduct slowing the necessary response to climate change, finding a positive way forward to capture the dynamism of the corporate form while channeling it in a positive way consistent with the public interest is vital. This Handbook gives the reader, in one shot, access to the thoughts of diverse viewpoints, but sharing a singular characteristic, all of them have perspectives worth considering.'

Neurodisability and the Criminal Justice System

Comparative and Therapeutic Responses

Edited by Gaye T. Lansdell, Bernadette J. Saunders and Anna Eriksson, Monash University, Australia

'Neurodisability may profoundly impact upon behaviour and cognition but remains invisible or misunderstood in many legal contexts. This volume is an essential resource for lawyers who represent people with neurodisability, advocates and judges. With rich, interdisciplinary research from international experts, the book addresses access to justice for people with conditions such as acquired brain injury, fetal alcohol syndrome and autism. The authors integrate recent insights on neurodisability with analysis of international legal developments to provide vital, concrete guidance for optimum advocacy. Many, many people and their advocates will benefit from this superb resource.'

Blockchain + Antitrust

The Decentralization Formula

Thibault Schrepel, Utrecht University, the Netherlands and Stanford University, US

'This book is the first of its kind. Schrepel's work will no doubt appeal to antitrusters looking for a didactic introduction to the blockchain. It will also be of more general interest to any reader with a concern for the future of law and public policy in a technology-driven world. A must-read.'

The Future of Copyright in the Age of Artificial Intelligence

Aviv H. Gaon, IDC Herzliya, Israel

'As thinking machines enter the creative marketplace, Dr. Aviv Gaon has produced a thoroughly researched and wide-ranging analysis of copyright protection for works created by or with artificial intelligence (AI). The book's provocative conclusion, that the law should evolve to recognize AI as capable of copyright-protected authorship of creative works, is a must read for humans (and AIs) interested in the rapidly unfolding future of intellectual property law and the creative arts.'

Carbon Markets Around the Globe

Sustainability and Political Feasibility

Sven Rudolph, Kyoto University, Japan and Elena Aydos, University of Newcastle, Australia

'This book is a comprehensive comparative study of emission trading schemes (ETSs), one of the most important "carbon pricing" instruments today. Its broad coverage of the world's major carbon markets is the most attractive feature of this book. Taking a political economy approach, it explains why ETSs were introduced, how they came to be in their current form, and gives their future perspectives. It will provide readers with an up-to-date understanding of the state of the world's carbon markets, and guidance for future climate policies.'

The Structure of Regulation

Explaining Why Regulation Succeeds and Fails

Edited by David Williamson, Staffordshire University and University of Manchester and Gary Lynch-Wood, University of Manchester, UK

'The Structure of Regulation delivers a fresh look at regulation and compliance. While keeping one foot solidly planted in conventional accounts of regulation, it takes a substantial step forward by integrating a thoughtful perspective on firm decision-making with a rich conception of regulatory structure. After carefully setting the theoretical stage and mapping the trade-offs presented in crafting regulation that aims for compliance, the book offers a cogent minmax methodology for regulatory design. It is nuanced but clear; provocative yet balanced.'

Rethinking the Regulation of Cryptoassets

Cryptographic Consensus Technology and the New Prospect

Syren Johnstone, The University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong SAR

'Cryptographic consensus technology presents extraordinary market opportunities but also raises a host of vexing regulatory challenges. Rethinking the Regulation of Cryptoassets maps this complex terrain and charts a way forward, offering a novel approach to the regulatory enterprise to protect against abuses while fostering innovation. Johnstone brings considerable legal, financial, and technological sophistication to the task, and his analysis is at once rigorous and accessible. This book will become essential reading on the future of cryptoassets.'

Rethinking Comparative Law

Simone Glanert, University of Kent, UK, Alexandra Mercescu, West University of Timisoara, Romania and Geoffrey Samuel, University of Kent, UK

'A fascinating and refreshing book on legal comparison! Challenging the orthodoxy, the book offers fruitful reflections on the role of language and culture in law, and discusses questions of method, or the lack thereof, interdisciplinarity and other core questions of legal comparison, including that of the existence of law.'

International Human Rights Law and Diplomacy

Kriangsak Kittichaisaree, Judge of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea

'The West has long dominated the development and enforcement of human rights law and the practice of human rights diplomacy. Kriangsak Kittichaisaree applies his deep and broad experience in the field to provide an eminently readable and essential piece of the global puzzle: an exposition of the history and present-day practice of human rights, as well as the challenges of tomorrow, from a wider perspective.'

Technology and Corporate Law

How Innovation Shapes Corporate Activity

Edited by Andrew Godwin, The University of Melbourne, Australia, Pey Woan Lee, Singapore Management University, Singapore and Rosemary Teele Langford, The University of Melbourne, Australia

'The breadth of perspectives of this work on technology and corporate law is as impressive as the insightfulness of its contributions. As technology heavily impacts corporate governance practices, organisational forms and the functioning of capital markets, this book deserves its place in the library of anyone with an interest in the present and the future of corporate law.'

Navigating the Free Trade–Fair Trade Fault-Lines

Michael J. Trebilcock, University of Toronto, Canada

'A broad sweep with deep insights. Michael Trebilcock at his best. From the "dark past" of trade history, to an overview of today's most notable scholarship on trade. From traditional topics like trade preferences for developing countries, to trade and the COVID pandemic and US–China trade relations. A great combination of neutrally describing the hot button issues in international trade, with offering personal opinions at each critical juncture.'
